CHAPTER-1

1. INTRODUCTION

Since time immemorial, forests have been an integral part of human ecosystem. They are nature's greatest bounty to mankind and play a very significant role in its life. Besides providing shelter and protection to a large number of living beings, including pre-historic man, they have been a major source of food, wood and a great variety of other products. Since ancient times forests have played important role in social, economic and religious activities and have enriched human life in variety of ways both material and psychological.

For million of years most of the parts of the terrestrial habitats i.e. the natural vegetation were forests. For several thousands of years, primitive man lived in forests as hunter and food gatherer component of forest ecosystem. In the later stages, forests were invaded and cleared for suitable agricultural pursuits, this was at such an early stage that man yet did not develop the iron implements and he had to girdle the tree with stone implements. From that stage to the present time, forests are viewed from two angles:

- I. Firstly they give valuable raw material and secondly,
- II. They are considered rivals for the space needed for crops and flocks.

Significance of Forests

Since ancient times forests have been integral parts of Indian society. Ancient literature of Hindu Mythology like Puranas, Vedas etc. have mentioned the significance of this natural resource for the community. Forests have not only proved significant for economic utility, but also influenced the social and economic life of the mankind, modified their views and provided new thoughts to poets and artists too. Number of different scriptures in the past have talked about these roles of forests. The Agni Purana (Hindu Scripture) while discussing the role of forests in human life goes so far as to say "That Man who plant trees for the welfare of the public obtain obsolete bliss." The Geeta (Another Hindu Scripture) mentions "Living beings survive on food. Food is produced by rain, rain depends on forests. Therefore, conservation of forests is necessary to keep it in a healthy state."

Our historical past is full of examples, which show that our ancestors recognizing forest's significance tried their best to conserve and protect this valuable natural resource. Not only in the past, but in Modern Indian Society also forests are treated sacred and there are many evidences when different sects of Indian Society at times have raised voice against deforestation successfully. "Chipko Movement" of Uttarakhand is the recent example of such awareness in our society.

But unfortunately, this awareness is restricted to very limited section of our society and a major population in the country is still unaware about significance of forests. As a result, the forests of the country are suffering at the hand of its own people. In such circumstances, it is very important that people are made aware of the significance of forests, so that they themselves take initiative to protect and conserve them successfully. Some of the significant features of forests are as follows:

Socio-economic significance of Forests:- Forestry makes several contributions, which are supporting sustained human welfare. These include direct benefits (physical products such as wood, food, medicines, fuel, fodder, fiber and organic fertilizer) as well as indirect and attributable benefits. As an inseparable component of the total land use systems, forestry has significant interrelationship with agricultural, pastoral and food-producing systems also. Through soil and water conservation and maintenance of soil fertility, forestry provides critical support for agricultural development. In addition, forest-based enterprises help increase rural employment and raise income and living standards of rural people, including forest dwellers and indigenous groups. The quality of life in rural areas depends upon the management of adjacent forests. Some of the following figures, especially in Indian context clearly show importance of forests.

- Over two-thirds of rural and half of the urban population use fuel wood for cooking purposes.
- About a quarter of India's livestock population, which is the largest in the world, is almost totally dependent on forestlands.
- About 70 per cent of India's population uses traditional medicine (mainly forest-based), and many of the rural poor have no access to other systems of medicine.
- Forest-based activities are often an important source of cash income for the poor, especially during lean seasons.
- The wild relatives of avocado, banana, cashew, cacao, cinnamon, coconut, coffee, grapefruit, lemon, paprika, oil, palm, rubber etc. worth billion of rupees are found in tropical forests.

Livelihood Generation :- Forestry is a comparatively labour-intensive activity. Forests and the diverse forest-based enterprises provide direct and indirect employment. As per Global Forest Resources Assessment (GFRA) 2010 about ten million people are employed in forest management and conservation globally, but many more are directly dependent on forest for their livelihood.. It is estimated that about 250 million person days are generated annually under various plan schemes taken up for forestry development in forest areas and other government lands. In addition, about 75 million person days are generated annually under agro-forestry and farm-forestry programmes. Non-plan activities, which include protection, maintenance and harvesting of forests, are estimated to generate about 100 million person days. Forests provide considerable employment to rural poor and tribal people in and around forest areas, who make a living either by consumption or sale/barter of various produce collected from the forest. The employment generated in the processing of the forest produce, both in the organized and unorganized sector, is also considerable.

Forests and Tribal Population:- Tribal population has intimate relationship with forests. Socio cultural and socio-economic pattern of the tribal population are inextricably linked with forests. Forests are source of subsistence and livelihood for the tribal communities. The tribal population is spread over in almost 188 districts of 26 states/ UTs in the country. This tribal land is very rich in forest, where almost 37.32% of the area is under forest (Table-1.7). The tribal population is very intimately related with the forest and depends on forest for its many needs viz.-

- Food in the forms of yams and other tubers, mushroom, bamboo shoots, several kinds of fruit and nuts, honey, red ants, eggs and meat;

- Fiber from the barks of trees and climbers, with which to fashion different kinds of rope and even clothes;
- Herbal Medicine, for common ailments;
- Oils, from seeds of different plant species for cooking, medicine and other purposes;
- Wood for building, agricultural implements and fuels;
- Bamboo- for fences and buildings, other daily use articles like baskets, bows, arrows and flutes;
- Twigs, used as toothbrushes, etc.

Forests in Kalahandi District

The Forest of Kalahandi displays a great floristic diversity due to wide variation in topography, altitude, climate, rock and soil. Mostly it is tropical in nature. There is no rain forest. The remarkable feature of the forest flora is the presence of sal, the only member of family Dipterocarpaceae. Consequent upon reorganization of Forest Department since 01.10.2003 vide Govt. in Forest and Environment Department Notification No.1F(A)- 100/2003/13228/F&E dt.08.08.2003, the erstwhile Kalahandi Forest Division is bifurcated into two Forest Divisions namely Kalahandi North Division and Kalahandi South Division.

Administrative Set up in the Division

Latitude is from 19° 43' 14.6" to 20° 27' 8.1"North and Longitude is from 82° 42' 29.7"to 83° 47' 46.7"East. It is bounded by Bolangir Forest Division of Bolangir District on North; Baliguda Forest Division of Kandhamal District on East; Rayagada Forest Division of Rayagada District and Kalahandi South Division of Kalahandi District is on South, Khariar Division of Nuapara District and Udanti Forest Division of Chhatisgarh State on West. There are five Ranges namely Bhawanipatna Range Headquarter at Bhawanipatna town, Kegaon Range headquarter at Kegaon town, Kesinga Range headquarter at Kesinga town, Madanpur Rampur Range and Narla Range both headquarter at Madanpur Rampur town, 20 nos. of sections and 94 nos. of beats. It covers part of Bhawanipatna Civil Sub-Division and part of Dharamgarh Civil Sub-Division.
